Dear Deloitte,

I am writing today to express great interest in your Solutions Engineering Consultant position. Considering that I am pursuing a dual degree in Computer Science & Information Systems and Business Administration (accounting concentration), I believe that I have a compatible background for this role. I view Deloitte as a leader in developing the next generation of accounting technology and aspire to be a part of this evolution.

At the University of Vermont (UVM) I have taken advantage of every opportunity presented to me from being a teacher's assistant, to joining various academic clubs and leadership organizations. I have also consistently proven to be a leader in the classroom by actively engaging in group projects and building strong relationships with teachers. Last year, based on performance in my accounting classes, I was selected as the Sophomore of Distinction by Grossman School of Business faculty, and I have received other scholarships based on leadership and academic performance.

Outside of academics, I have a professional background that has aligned me well for this role. Most recently, I have worked for PricewaterhouseCoopers in their Global Mobility Technology group. This experience has opened my eyes to many tools and business processes that are crucial in today's constantly evolving workforce. I have encountered projects in all corners of product development life cycle from DevOps activities, to writing code, to creating QA pipeline tests. Additionally, I have learned to communicate effectively to all levels of the organization by participating in regular standup meetings, working on projects with fellow interns, and presenting deliverables. My earlier work experience was with Fincura (fintech startup) where I was a member of a small agile development team. I wrote product level code within the AngularJS framework based on client requests. Working for a startup was a great experience because I got to see how the company operates at a high level and was forced to take initiative and step out of my comfort zone.

I hope that you consider me a competitive candidate, as I can most certainly see my career taking off at Deloitte! Thank you very much, and I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

Trevor McGlaflin
